

Prof Jun PAN
Academy of Language and Culture

It has been a pleasure working with my current HKPFS student from Spain. His commitment to Corpus-based Translation Studies, both as my former Research Assistant and through his MPhil under my supervision, has been exemplary. The HKPFS funding has been crucial, allowing him to pursue advanced research and attend conferences. I am happy to have participated in the cultivation of such a strong talent for Hong Kong's education sector.

Dr Jos BARTELS
Department of Communication Studies

I am honoured to have supervised an excellent HKPFS student at the School of Communication over the past few years. The candidate is now finalizing her thesis study in Ghana, on the role of gamification in the workplace. She has shown to be curious, enthusiastic, eager to learn and extremely polite and humble. Excellent characteristics for a young ambitious scholar. Although it will be hard to say goodbye, luckily, I am very happy that a new HKPFS candidate will join our Department in the next academic year. I am sure that my cooperation with the new candidate will be as prosperous and joyful.

Charlotte Marie CHADWICK
Awardee in Humanities and Creative Writing from New Zealand

I chose to undertake my PhD at HKBU because of the creativity and cosmopolitanism of Hong Kong. I am grateful to be able to pursue further studies and advance my career in the stimulating yet supportive environment of HKBU. The resources available through the university and the HKPFS award have provided invaluable support, allowing me to attend conferences and network with colleagues from all over the world.

Fernando GABARRÓN BARRIOS
Awardee in Translation, Interpreting, and Intercultural Studies from Spain

I am truly humbled and grateful to be a recipient of the prestigious HKPFS funding at HKBU, a leading liberal arts university in Asia. The nurturing environment fostered by the Department complemented by the expert guidance of my esteemed supervisors and the unwavering support of the faculty, has enabled me to make significant progress as an emerging scholar. The generous HKPFS funding allows me to concentrate fully on academic pursuits, including presenting my research at international conferences and publishing research reports, without financial constraints.

Ernestina Ohenewaah DENCHIE
Awardee in Geography from Ghana

I enjoy my PhD studies thanks to HKBU's enabling research environment, well equipped modern library resources and renowned Professors who guides PhD students for quality research output. HKBU has sharpened my research skills through my supervisors, advanced research methodology training, departmental seminars, faculty workshops and international conferences. I am very grateful to this prestigious University, and the RGC for the HKPFS funding for an exciting PhD experience. I highly recommend HKBU to potential HKPFS applicants for a supportive PhD journey.

MA Yingshuang
Awardee in Accountancy from Mainland China

Studying at HKBU as an HKPFS awardee has been an excellent experience for me. The Business School offers a wealth of learning resources and interdisciplinary opportunities. Moreover, I appreciate the collaborative and intellectually stimulating research environment within the Department. The guidance and support from my supervisors and fellow faculty members have been invaluable in shaping my academic growth.

YANG Zhuda
Awardee in Physics from Mainland China

HKBU offers an exceptional environment for those passionate about interdisciplinary research, a pursuit that resonates deeply with my academic interests. My investigation into neural dynamics has benefited immensely from the support of distinguished physicists in the Department. Additionally, the opportunity to work in close collaboration with Life Science Imaging Centre has been instrumental. This partnership allows me to integrate physical models with experimental data, significantly enhancing my comprehension of the neural system and contributing to the distinctiveness of our research project.
